MALCOLM LOWRY

Born in New Brighton, Malcolm Lowry sailed from Birkenhead Docks in 1927, the first adventure in a colourful life that would produce his literary masterpiece, Under the Volcano. Find out more about him and his work at this event, which includes an illustrated talk at 2.30pm, part of the Lowry Lounge programme organised by Liverpool's contemporary arts centre, Bluecoat and The Williamson café.

MALCOLM LOWRY

The Lighthouse Invites the Storm

To mark the 70th anniversary of Malcolm Lowry's seminal novel Under the Volcano (1947) artists Alan Dunn, Martin Heslop and Jeff Young developed a series of performances and posters reconnecting Lowry with his New Brighton birthplace.

Working with retired seafarers from the Wirral and sound artists from Yorkshire and Mexico, the artists reimagined New Brighton's nautical landmarks with musical stormscapes and lyrical poems driven by Mersey tides.

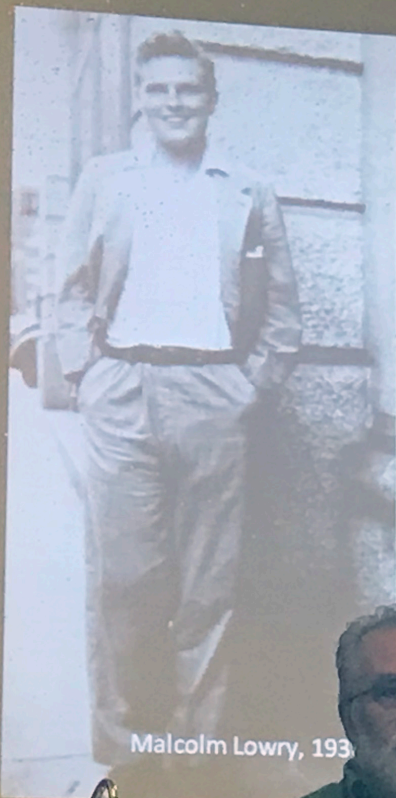

Across the 42-minute composition, Jeff Young's words fuse with Heslop's soundtracks, reflecting upon Lowry's leaving of Liverpool at a young age, the empty River Mersey seen by the old men taking model ships to New Brighton every Sunday and the retired seafarers who navigated Vietnam in Shell tankers as we landed on the moon.

SCHOOLBOY'S WORLD SEARCH FOR INSPIRATION.

Fresh from Low College, Cambridge, Maurice Lavery, the seventeen-year-old son of a Liverpool cotton broker, sails tomorrow on board the Arcturion on his way to a holiday at 12 the school in the summer Pacific, where he is going on a tramp voyage to the Far East, calling at Port Said, Singapore, and possibly Yokohama.

Young Lavery, who lives with his parents at Inghamton, Crosby, Crosby, told an Echo representative today, that he desires to see something of the world and gain some experience of life before going to the university.

"The voyage will last eight to ten months," he said, "and during that time

I shall work just the same as the other members of the crew. I shall not receive—and I don't want—any privileges.

WRITING AND COMPOSING.

"The work will keep me fit, and will be a good thing for me. As I write short stories and compose dance music I hope to get fresh atmosphere and inspiration."

I shall take my ukulele with me, and when all waters shall try to think out some new dance tunes. Ronald Hill, a school chum of mine, and I have written several Christmas carols, one of which, "Three Little Doves," was mentioned in the Echo during some weeks ago, has already been published.

Other dance tunes we have composed are "Hindu Babe," "You Got to Play Hot Rhythm," "Dress Man's a'Coming on a Train of Stars," "Dromal Swamp," "Dumpty Blues" and "I've Said Good-bye to Shanghai."

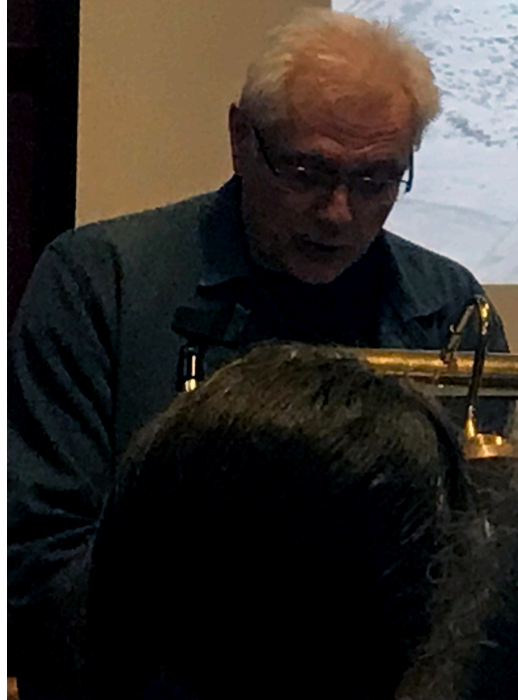

Lavery, who won the Hoylake Boys' Golf Championship in 1925, is a brother of W. M. Lavery, the Broadhead Park and international hockey player.

ONCE QUITE ENOUGH.

COTTON BROKE'S SON AS DECKHAND

"I do not regret my action, but I do regret to go to sea again," stated Mr. Malcolm Lowry, the 30-year-old son of a Liverpool cotton broker, who has just returned from a four-month voyage as a deckhand, to a Daily Mail reporter.

His hardest job was shipping the paint in the hold of a ship loaded with light paint. As a rule, I worked from 5.30 in the morning until 7.30 at night, scrubbing decks, painting, and carrying the paint to the engine.

I took my meals with me and tried to consume some fresh fruit. I have to go on for a university and complete some more tests and write fiction.

On The Table

BY THE ROOM TALKER

Mr. Malcolm Lowry is Liverpool's latest sensation. His first book is "Under the Volcano" (Cape), a very unusual and striking story. It is a story of a man, or perhaps one should say, in the month of a spiritual struggle, fought out on a Liverpool tramp steamer in Eastern waters. The hero is a highly educated young man, who should never have gone to sea in such circumstances. It is a story of a man's search for a new life, and a story of a man's search for a new life.

Mr. Lowry, we are told in the publisher's blurb, lived through such an experience for himself. Probably not, if not some young man, have had such an experience, but of course, under very different conditions. As the conditions of Mr. Lowry's story are both actual and imaginary. The author is a man of the sea, he is all for plain and strong language and he is not afraid to use it. He is a man of the sea, he is all for plain and strong language and he is not afraid to use it. He is a man of the sea, he is all for plain and strong language and he is not afraid to use it.
